The DAUGHTER of DAVID KERR

SYNOPSIS.

Gloria Kerr, a motherless girl, who has spent most of her life in school, arrives at her father's home in Belmont. David Kerr is the political boss of the town, and is anxious to prevent his daughter from learning of his real character. Kendall, representing the Chicago packers, is negotiating with Judge Gilbert, Kerr's chief adviser, for a valuable franchise. They fear the opposition of Joe Wright, editor of the reform paper, Kerr asks the assistance of Judge Gilbert in introducing Gloria to Belmont society, and promises to help him put through the packers' franchise and let him have all the graft. Gloria meets Joe Wright at the Gilberts. It appears they are on intimate terms, having met previously in a touring party in Europe. The Gilberts invite Gloria to stay with them pending the furnishing of the Kerr home. Wright begins his fight against the proposed franchise in the columns of his paper, the Belmont News. Kerr, through his henchmen, exerts every influence to hamper Wright in the publication of his paper. Gloria realizes she is not being received by the best society and is unhappy. She takes up settlement work. Kerr and his lieutenants decide to buy Kerr's paper and ask the editor to meet them at Gilbert's office. Calling at Gilbert's office to solicit a donation Gloria meets Wright. He proposes and is accepted while waiting to be called into the conference. Wright refuses to sell his paper and declares he will fight to a finish. The Belmont News appears with a bitter attack on Kerr. Gloria calls Wright a coward and refuses to listen to any explanation from him. Broken-hearted, Gloria decides to plunge more deeply into settlement work.

Although Gloria had professed that she had no fear about being left with the sick woman, when she said it she had in mind only a fear of being alone in such a dismal lodging house and fear that she might be called upon to act as doctor and trained nurse both were her patient to take a turn for the worse. Now, however, a new thought came to her. How was she to act? What was she to do to amuse her? She felt instinctively the antipathy she had aroused. She covered like a lamb before this young she-wolf of the city. She was alone, defenseless, with this creature that had so far reverted to type that she might rend and tear. Even in a battle of wits and that was all there would be if the girl did not ignore her entirely. Gloria felt herself no match for this brazen child of misfortune. Her comparisons were physical, but it was not a physical fear she felt. Sheltered inexperience was pitted against the most cruel experience society could ever devise or tolerate.

Gloria was mistaken in thinking that Little Ella slept. After Mrs. Hayes had left her she walked quietly back to a chair by the bedside. On it lay a cheap novel with which the sick woman had been beguiling the time. She picked it up and was turning the pages casually when a feeling stole over her that she was being observed. Putting aside the book, she found Little Ella gazing at her stonily.

"Say, what'd you come here for?"

"Why," she answered in surprise, "I wanted to help you."

A sneer curled the sick woman's lip, a cynical sneer of disbelief.

"Help me? To what? I ain't ever saw you down here before. Come on, what brought you?"

"I came with Mrs. Hayes," was all that Gloria could find to answer.

"The woman what just went out?"

"Yes."

Feeling that she must do something to end this catechism, Gloria happened to glance at the book she held in her hand, and this led her to ask:

"Wouldn't you like me to read to you?"

"Naw. I can read fer myself."

"Perhaps there is something else I might do. What do you say, I might write a letter for you?"

"A letter? Who to?"

"Isn't there some one who ought to know you are sick?"

"Who'd want to hear from me?" the woman replied sullenly. "I ain't the belle of the village any more."

"Haven't you a mother?"

"She's dead."

"A father, then? Isn't there some one watching for you, hoping to see you come down the quiet little street?"

Here was an attempt to awaken a sentiment for the past which met with no success. Little Ella replied roughly:

"They're watching at his house all right—all right—and that nasty face wife of his—so they can run out and unchain the dog. Then they'd gather in the parlor an' say prayers for the dead—that's me."

"What could you have done to have your family treat you so?" Gloria asked. "What could you do to be estranged from your father, of all persons?"

This was something Gloria could not understand. Once she would not have understood a lack of love where two had lived together continuously. Now she could waive that point, but the estrangement was beyond her.

Little Ella considered the question gravely. What was she to tell this inquisitive girl who evidently was not asking questions just for the fun of prying into some one else's life? Somehow or other Gloria began to appeal to her. She had decided that the visitor's ignorance was real, not feigned. In reply to the question as to why she was not received at home, she turned her big dark eyes, listless now, upon Gloria, and said quietly:

"I loved."

"Oh!" exclaimed Gloria, and a sudden pain shot through her.

"Oh, what?"

"Was it really love?"

The question came forth without a thought of how it might affect her hearer. It did, indeed, provoke Little Ella, taking away that kindly feeling which had begun to kindle in her heart because of Gloria's ignorance.

"Didn't I say I loved?" she demanded harshly. "What do you know of love? You can't come down here and teach me anything. Pooh! I don't believe you know what real love is. Were you ever in love?"

Ordinarily to a girl reared as Gloria had been no more serious affront could have been offered her. It was a meddling with her private affairs which was unpardonable.

"Was you?"

Little Ella asked the question again with the sharpness gained from listening to the city attorney cross-examine witnesses in police court. Seeing that she was almost compelled to say "yes" or "no," Gloria replied defiantly:

"Yes, I was."

"And yer not married?"

"No."

"Goin' to be?"

A pause.

"No."

"Say, yer overlookin' a bet. What's the matter?"

Gloria felt herself fascinated by this slight little woman who in her excitement had propped herself up in bed on a thin trembling arm. The light had come back into her eyes as she pursued her inquiries and they shone like two burning coals.

"He didn't really love me," Gloria said more to herself than to the girl.

"Did he tell you so? How do you know?" There was no answer. "Hu! You asked me questions so I thought I'd ask you some. Did he know you loved him?"

"He did, but—my father discovered that he was unworthy."

This information seemed to Little Ella to be a bond of fellowship. She fell back on the bed to rest, and remarked philosophically:

"Humph! My ol' man thought the feller I loved was no good, too. Guess we've had pretty hard times, eh?" No reply. "What'd you think?"

"I—I—he was unworthy."

It was now Gloria who spoke listlessly.

"So you had to choose between 'im an' yer father?"

"Was there any choice? I gave him up."

"I left home. So, you see, I've loved more'n you've ever loved," she cried.

"You didn't really love," There was scorn in her voice as she spoke. "I've gone through fire an' storm fer the man I loved, because I loved a real man. You must a' loved some kid at the ribbon counter. A real man wouldn't a' let you give him up."

This was a tribute to the animal perfection of the graceful young creature before her. The sight of Gloria as something to be desired, to be possessed, made Little Ella feel that no man with red blood in his veins would give her up without a fight. She hated her for her masses of beautiful hair, her deep, soulful eyes, her complexion of apple blossoms, her delicate white hands. She hated her for her sweet, girlish figure and her beautiful clothes which brought out her best lines. A woman may be down in the world, but she has eyes to see her.

"Look at me," she cried, beating her flat breasts with her red, bony hands. "A man died fer me—an' he thought I was worth it. Did you love a man well enough for him to do that fer you?"

Gloria could only avoid the question by tactlessly referring to Little Ella's present state.

"You don't know what you're saying. Can't you see what he's brought you to?"

"Don't you say a word against him," snapped the sick woman. "All men ain't alike, neither. It wasn't his fault I'm here. It's the system."

"The system! What's that?"

Here was the introduction of a new element. Gloria's curiosity was aroused. There was something inexorable about it, to judge from Little Ella's manner of speaking.

"Well, call it society, if you want to," conceded society's victim.

"What do you mean?"

"Say, are you stringin' me, or was you born yeastidy?"

She laughed harshly at the humor of such a question.

"I don't understand," was all Gloria could reply.

CHAPTER XVII.

Gloria had not been reared without an understanding of the various layers of society. Of those close to her own station in life she had an intimate and intelligent knowledge, but as she went down the scale her acquaintance grew slighter and her understanding more vague. The poor creatures whom as a class Little Ella now regarded as her were almost as foreign and as misunderstood as would be a lama of Tibet. Having no knowledge, she could have no real pity.

Gloria had never dreamed, even when she tried to put the worst possible construction on what few things she knew, that the world could be so cruel. Never for an instant had she thought that it was possible for men whom she regarded as upright and honorable to be engaged directly or indirectly in exploiting vice and ignorance. It had never occurred to her that men whom she might know, some of them owned dreary blocks of hovels and tenements from which high rents were secured only because the people who lived in them were not respectable. Poor and honest tenants could have paid but poor and precarious rents.

As Little Ella told her story of the "system" at Gloria's request, her voice grew shriller and shriller as the indictment grew graver. She talked rapidly, sometimes turning aside from the direct channel of her revelation, to explore some little eddy of a specific instance which made her account a reality. Gloria could have credited something to exaggeration had it not been that just at the moment she thought the girl was beginning to draw on her imagination some incident would be introduced suddenly to make the whole thing ghastly real.

For the first time the daughter of David Kerr learned of the peddlers of showy dresses, the vendors of cheap perfume, the stealthy disseminators of cocaine, and the many other leeches that fatten on the unfortunate of the underworld. She learned that all the misery was but a monument to human greed. Nothing was exploited in which there was not a profit of three or four hundred per cent. Nothing was exploited which did not tend to kill the finer feelings, reducing the poor victims in time to the level of brutes.

"And the men down here," Little Ella cried, the memory of the good, wholesome men whom she had known in her earlier life coming back to smite her, "poor ignorant excuses fer men, most of 'em—all they're good fer is to steal an' lie an' live off us women, an' vote the way the boss tells 'em on election day. An' who's responsible fer that? Say?" Gloria could make no reply, and Ella, whose pause had been rhetorical, uncouth as she was, made answer herself. "I know. The fine gentlemen what buys the votes. An' when they needs more money fer more votes they send the 'flee' round, an' us poor girls has to pay, always, pay."

"I never dreamed of such a thing."

"I tol' you you didn't know. Why, once I was good like you, too. An' now, I's began to sob—now—I'm down—an' I can't get up. I can't get up. It's too late."

Suddenly Gloria remembered the power to which she would appeal. Where a minute before had been darkness and uncertainty was now the clearness of a summer day.

"It's never too late," she insisted.

"Remember, I'm not alone. My father will help me. He's brave and good and strong, with a heart of gold. I can change the world's ways, maybe, but I can do something to make Belmont better with my father's help—and yours."

Gloria was a doctory Crusader, and

"The boss gets it."

"Oh, yes. This boss—who is he? What does he do to earn his money?"

"That's what he gets fer perfectin' us. He keeps the bulls from juggin' us."

"And he don't pay?"

"He gives 'em the tip an' we're hauled in, and sent up for thirty days."

This didn't accord with Gloria's idea of law and justice. Here was a man, without authority and as his whim dictated, arrested people because they would not do something unlawful. And the police, instead of being instruments of the law, were under the direction of this boss.

"Can't the law touch him?" she asked.

"Hu! He's the law in this town."

"Do you mean to tell me there is a man so base," demanded the daughter of David Kerr indignantly, "this boss, that spends his time collecting this money?"

"He gives 'em the tip an' we're hauled in, and sent up for thirty days."

This didn't accord with Gloria's idea of law and justice. Here was a man, without authority and as his whim dictated, arrested people because they would not do something unlawful. And the police, instead of being instruments of the law, were under the direction of this boss.

"Can't the law touch him?" she asked.

"Hu! He's the law in this town."

"Do you mean to tell me there is a man so base," demanded the daughter of David Kerr indignantly, "this boss, that spends his time collecting this money?"

Word from Middleboro is to the effect that Dr. W. Godfrey Hunter, the gum shoe politician and about the best that ever lingered in the ranks of the Republicans is to be a candidate for the nomination of U. S. Senator and declares he will be able to "come back." He is a dangerous figure and his opponents had better be on guard all the time.

CANNOT RAISE THE SICK.

That the President's trust message will be highly important and contain his best information and strongest conviction is easily assumable. But that it will answer as a trumpet note, at which prostrate business will take up its bed and walk, is unfortunately for him and for business, out of the question. —Washington Star.

THE CHILD THE TENDEREST AND GREATEST ASSET.

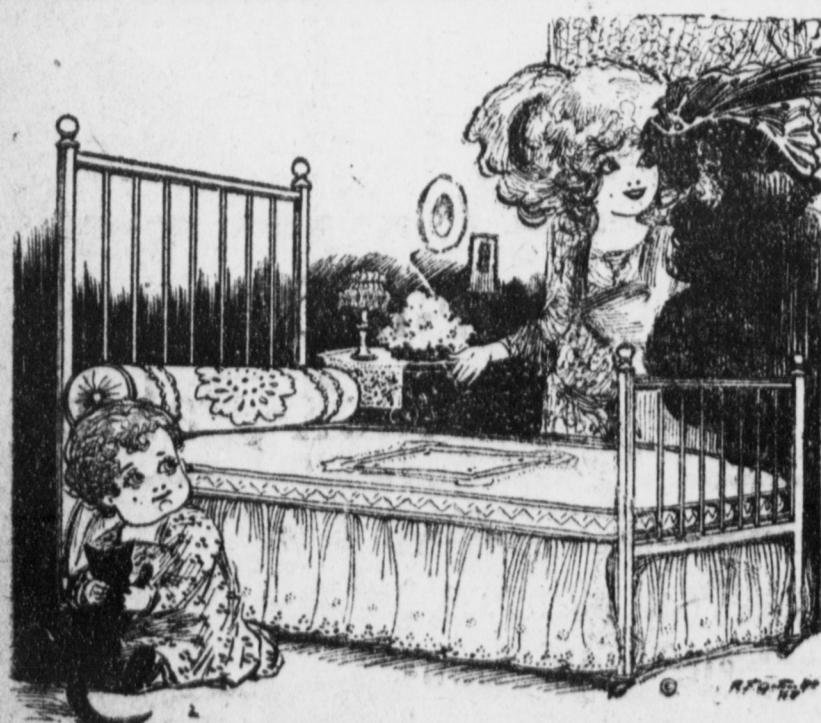

Recent years have been marked by an increase in interest taken by the public in the reclamation and development of children. There was a time when children were allowed to shuffle for themselves and if they went astray no helping hands were extended toward them. Courts regarded them as little villains to be sent to the lock up like mature and hardened criminals.

THE THREE R'S SUPERFLUOUS.

Stories are common of dull children who can't keep up with their classes in ordinary schools, but who develop life, interest and increased intelligence at manual training. A variation of this sort of tale comes from Jersey City, where a 14-year-old boy, so stupid that he could not get beyond the primary grade and was turned over to a special teacher, was accidentally found to be a musical genius. The piano offers no difficulties to him and the musical director of the public schools predicts for him a brilliant career.

What does it matter to a boy like that whether he knows the multiplication table or not, or whether he ever learns how to estimate the number of rolls of wall paper that will be required for a room? Will it lessen his joy or success in life that he can not spell correctly or write a legible hand? Will his educational deficiencies make the delight of his hearers in his rendition of great music any the less keen?

All these questions may be answered in the negative. Only commonplace, everyday people like the vast majority of us find these things essential to our progress in life and our peace of mind. At least we can not afford to be without them. If we can not spell and write and "figure" properly we are rated as ignorant and suffer accordingly, both socially and industrially. But if we could sing like Caruso or Mary Garden, if we could play the piano like Paderewski or the violin like Macmillen, our shortcomings in other lines of endeavor would not only cause us no regrets, but would be regarded by the world as interesting characteristics. There are conditions under which the three R's are of little consequence. —Louisville Herald.

MAYBE GLOOMY BUT HE'S NOT GRAND.

Hon. William Sulzer is grand, gloomy and alone in the New York Legislature. Recommendation being refused him for membership in the standing committees by the Republicans, Democrats and Progressives, the Speaker assigned him as the sole representative of the Progressive Democratic party. —Cincinnati Enquirer.

INDIVIDUALITY AND PERSONALITY.

Commenting on the fact that these two words are used interchangeably in ordinary language, the writer says, "in Theosophical parlance they have separate and contrasted meanings, but represent a most important distinction. The Individuality is the Self or Ego which persists throughout the cycle of rebirth; it is the real man, the real I. The personalities are the temporary masks which the Individuality wears during its periods of earth-life." —The Theosophical Path.

MR. FORD, WHY NOT DO THE SQUARE THING ALL AROUND?

The distribution of $10,000,000 among its employees of the Ford Motor Co. is a situation so unusual and exceptional that only in a few cases would a similar distribution be possible.

If Mr. Ford is so anxious to do the square thing why does he continue to send out thousands of columns of dead-beat copy to the newspapers, saying that it is "useful information to the public," when in truth it is only pure advertising of his big plant. The Public Ledger has received more than 100 columns of this "stuf" with the specious tip to use free for the benefit of the reading public.

Mr. Ford can afford to square things with his 26,000 employees, but we suppose his free ad. department will continue working some gullible newspapers.

THE "LOTUS EATER" WORKMAN.

Ultimately, the initial step of the American efficiency engineer will be a campaign of popular education in the principles of political economy.

The laboring masses, almost as a unit, are dissatisfied with conditions as they exist, and their feelings are wholly identified with the radical amendment of such conditions, says a writer in "Coal Age."

Philosophers recognize two theories for the world's betterment. One has for its goal the highest ideal of human life, Utopia; the other strives for the immediately useful and practically attainable.

The former, distorted into a sort of lotus eaters' dream of Elysium, and which contemplates the division of the world's goods as a panacea for unhappiness and an end of toil, has come to be the one most commonly accepted by those who work with their hands.

It is an unfortunate fact that, along political lines, these people allow others to do a great deal of their thinking for them, and presented with the arguments of one side of a proposition, are inclined, in the absence of controverting evidence, to accept those arguments as proof conclusive of the correctness of the theory they support; while had the adherents to the opposite theory been nearly so aggressive in presenting their arguments, it is improbable that the present industrial discontent would have had more than a slight foothold, for, given both sides of a question, it is characteristic of a majority of the people to judge aright.

COMPLIMENTS.

Judge Story and Edward Everett were once the guests of honor at a banquet. The former as a voluntary toast gave the following:

"Fame follows merit where Everett goes!"
The gentleman thus delicately complimented at once arose and replied with equally felicitous impromptu:
"To whatever height judicial learning may attain in this country there will always be one Story higher."

50 YEARS AGO IN CINCINNATI.

(Commercial Tribune.)

Where the eastern end of Pogue's store on Fourth street now stands was a two-and-a-half story lead-colored brick residence that stood up high, back in a yard, approached by stone steps.

In this house, managed by "Billy" Wilkinson, daily gathered the greatest literary lights and some of the finest artists in this country.

It was a clubhouse, its walls adorned with artistic gems.
There the immortal W. W. Fosdick, wrote some of his choicest poems, among them "We Were Very Poor Together, Mary;" T. Buchanan Read and James J. Gallagher, exquisite poetical gems, B. F. Taylor told in verse of romances upon and near Dry Ridge, Ky.; William G. Crippen gathered together his pods for the "Invisible Green" book on green peas; Alf Burnett entertained with delineations galore; Lew Wallace and John P. Foote of The Literary Gazette were frequent visitors and here it was that was discovered the poem that first brought into the limelight Murat Halstead, discovered by James Beard and Will P. Noble, the water-color artist, who, for the edification of the "literary cusses," sprang Halstead's first composition, "The Red-Headed Maiden of the Blue Miami," and Halstead to his dying day never forgave Beard and Noble for the "give-away."
Then there was William M. Corry, stately and tall, with the dignified William S. Groesbeck, who, as he sat at the window reading the New York papers, gave occasional glances across the way to the Presbyterian Church of which he was an officer and honorable and respected member.
They were all giants in those days. There were too many to enumerate. Their memories, however, are kept green.

IOWA WOMAN TELLS OTHERS

How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Carried Her Safely Through Change of Life.

Cedar Rapids, Iowa. — "At the Change of Life the doctor said I would have to give up my work and take my bed for some time as there was no help for me but to lie still. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and kept up my work and now I am over the Change and that is all I took. It was better for me than all the doctor's medicines I tried. Many people have no faith in patent medicines but I know this is good." — Mrs. E. Ruckers, 354 8th Avenue, West, Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

Such warning symptoms as sense of suffocation, hot flashes, headaches, back-aches, dizziness, trembling, irritability, sounds in the ears, palpitation of the heart, sparks before the eyes, irregularities, constipation, variable appetite, weakness and inquietude, and dizziness, are promptly heeded by intelligent women who at approaching the period in life when woman's great change may be expected.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound invigorates and strengthens the female organism and builds up the weakened nervous system. It has carried many women safely through this crisis.

THAT TIRED FEELING
Suggested Grandmother's Remedy.
It's true, the season is here with its sudden changes, and the old idea that we need a blood medicine is not without reason. Too much heavy food has caused a torpid liver, sluggish blood, and a weak, tired out feeling.
Sulphur, cream of tartar and molasses was grandmother's remedy but that has long ago been displaced by Vinol, a combination of the two most world famed tonics, namely, the medicinal curative elements of the cod's liver, without oil, and iron for the blood.
Vinol builds you up, makes you eat more and digest better, makes your blood rich and pure—puts healthy color in your cheeks.
N. G. Clift of Opelika, Ala., says:
"Last spring I was all run-down, no strength, no appetite. I took Vinol and was greatly benefited by its use.
I soon felt strong and well as ever."
We guarantee Vinol to satisfy you and refund your money if it does not.

WIDOW KILLED BY TRAIN.

Portsmouth, O.—Mrs. Laura Evans, 62 years old, a widow, of Riverton, Ky., was run down and killed by C. and O. west-bound flyer, near Fullerton, Ky., two miles east of Portsmouth. She was walking along the tracks and failed to notice the approach of the train.

Friday, a young man with both legs amputated close to the hips and sitting on a single roller skate, rolled merrily past The Democrat office on one of the rails of the L. & N. R. R., making rapid progress south. He had a short board in each hand with which he propelled himself. The young fellow was unusually good looking, wore a cowboy hat and as much of a cowboy suit as his anatomy called for, including the regulation sheepskin leggings with the wooly side out. He had rolled around on the concrete sidewalks a while seeing the town before taking to the railroad for his journey to the Southland.—Cynthiana Democrat.

PRISON COMMISSION EXTENDS A CONTRACT.
Frankfort.—The prison commission extended the contract with the Kentucky Broom Works at Eddyville for from seventy-five to 100 men at 75 cents a day. The contract with the broom works expires February 1 and no definite time is fixed in the extension of the contract for its termination, as the commissioners are waiting to see what action the legislature will take in purchasing a farm on which the convicts may be worked or for the permission to work them on the public roads. Attorney General Garrett is preparing a bill for the prison, to be introduced into the legislature, authorizing the commissioners to purchase farms adjacent to the penitentiaries on which to work the prisoners.

MORE ANIMADVERSIONS
On a Live Subject: Does Maysville Need a Patrol Wagon?
Editor Ledger: You asked in your paper some time ago if an auto patrol was an item of necessity in the affairs of our city. I think not. We have one beautiful toy ($3,000.00 worth) and no place to keep it, but in a short time when the legislature fixes things up to suit the demagogues, and our county cousins get a whack at our liquor revenues we might use the new auto patrol for a peddler's cart to peddle our bonds, so that the street paving contractors would not have it to do, or we might use it and the Uncle Bob to place grave stones along Second street.

Think it would be a wise idea to see if this plethora of money is an inexhaustible one, and instead of making arrangements to place an added burden on the tax payers, would it not be wise to begin to retrench and devise ways and means to replace the $20,000.00 of revenue that will be cut off when our local option friends finish with us.
Signed,
Mene, Mene, Tekel, Upharsin.
P. S. Do you know of any time prior to the last two or three years that our bonds ever sold for less than par?

KENTUCKY BOY BEATEN BY FELLOW CADETS.
Asheville.—Lewis Reed, of Horse Cave, Ky., was severely beaten by four of his fellow cadets at Bingham School here. This was brought about when he informed his teachers of the boys who had hazed him a few nights previous. It is not thought that his injuries are serious. The cadets who attacked him were arraigned before a magistrate on charges of assault and were fined. They were then dismissed from the school.

TAFT TAKES A SHOT AT WAVE OF SOCIAL ANARCHY SWEEPING OVER THE WORLD.

Philadelphia, January 22.—In a speech here Wednesday night, former President Taft deplored the hysterical and impractical "reforms" that are riding through the nation, and called for a halt in the movement which calls itself "pure democracy."

Views of Taft.
"Lubricity" in education, on the stage and in literature, is a danger. Spanking would be proper treatment for children who go on foolish school strikes.

Sex literature is causing former modesty and restraints to be abandoned. Well-to-do are being made scapegoats for those yielding to sin.

We are not going into socialism, which would mean tyranny of majority and dead level of retrogression.

PORTSMOUTH CLUB PULLS OFF A BIG BASE BALL DEAL.

(Portsmouth Times.)
One of the biggest baseball deals ever pulled off in the Ohio State League since its origin was closed at the annual meeting of the league at Lexington, Ky., Tuesday evening, when President William Gableman of the local club traded "Biddy" Borer, Homer Cain and Ed Hartwig to the Lexington club for Weller, Gooseberry and Dunlap. Confirmation of the deal was received by The Times Wednesday morning in a wire from President Gableman who added that other deals involving local players were pending and would be closed before he returned home.

Announcement of the deal caused great surprise among local fans. Wednesday, although it was understood that some of the players on the local roster were ticketed to cavort in new fields next season if a satisfactory deal could be arranged. All six of the players involved are well known to Portsmouth fans, having been playing in the Ohio State league from one to three years each.

A "51" DAY.

Sunday will be a "More than fifty day" at the Christian Church.

There have been placed before the congregation placards to announce the day for two weeks past. No explanation was given. It is now known that the idea of the announcement originated with the Endeavors who seek to have over fifty at their Christian Endeavor meeting next Sunday evening.

However the desire to have at least 51 present now possesses the men of the Men Class in the Bible School and of the teachers in the Junior and Primary departments of this church. The scholars in these classes are expected to be present and bring visitors.

Once before the Men's Class had in it "more than fifty." They desire to have it so Sunday.

The hand-work planned for the Junior and Primary classes can be continued Sunday as the tables will be installed by then.

Our Colored Citizens.

On Tuesday evening, January 20th, at 3 o'clock, the members of Congo River Tabernacle No. 80, held a most delightful session at their lodge rooms in the Odd Fellow's building.

This being the occasion of the annual visit of Chief Grand Mentor A. Q. Greene of Mayfield, Ky., the members were out in all their splendor and the happy beams of joy seemed to be in evidence everywhere. As Mr. A. Q. Greene is one of the most graceful and entertaining talkers in the State there is always a full attendance on his annual visit.

At the close of this indeed, splendid meeting a surprise came to the Grand Chief and members alike, like a thunder bolt from a clear sky. When Mrs. Alice Lane, the faithful and beloved High Priestess of Congo River Tabernacle No. 80, came forward and after a tender, touching and timely talk to the members, she tendered her resignation as High Priestess of the Congo River Tabernacle. The Chief Grand Mentor and members were "thunder-struck" and put forth every effort to have Mrs. Lane reconsider the matter and continue at the head of the lodge. She felt however, that she had served them long and faithfully and this was the opportune time for her to give up her post while the Grand Chief Mentor Greene was here on his annual visit, when he could name her successor. Mrs. B. L. Dudley was appointed as the new High Priestess. The Chief Grand Mentor paid Mrs. Lane the compliment of not only being the best High Priestess that Congo River Tabernacle has ever had but the best in the State.

PECULIAR AFTER RESULTS OF GRIP THIS YEAR

Leaves Kidneys in Weakened Condition

Doctors in all parts of the country have been kept busy with the epidemic of grip which has visited so many homes. The symptoms of grip this year are often very distressing and leave the system in a run-down condition, particularly the kidneys which seem to suffer most, as almost every victim complains of lame back and urinary troubles which should not be neglected, as these danger signals often lead to dangerous kidney troubles. Druggists report a large sale on Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root which so many people say soon heals and strengthens the kidneys after an attack of grip. Swamp-Root is a great kidney, liver and bladder remedy, and being an herbal compound, has a gentle healing effect on the kidneys, which is almost immediately noticed in most cases by those who try it. Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. offer to send a sample size bottle of Swamp-Root, on receipt of ten cents, to every sufferer who requests it. A trial will convince any one who may be in need of it. Regular size bottles 50 cents and $1.00. For sale at all druggists. Be sure to mention this paper.

Rev. Albert Hales Former Pastor of the Dover Christian Church Gets Big Charge.

(Augusta Chronicle.)

Elder Albert Hales left here Saturday morning for Wurtland, Greenup County, to join Mrs. Hales and children, who preceded him to that point several days before.

After spending a few days with his family he will leave for New York City, from which point he will sail for Southampton, England, where he will visit his mother, who is about 80 years of age, as well as brothers and sisters in various parts of England. Rev. Hales has accepted a conditional call to the pastorate of the Christian Church at Liverpool, the second largest church of this denomination in England, for three months, with the understanding that if the charge is agreeable to him he will accept the pastorate, in which event Mrs. Hales and the children will join him and they will make that country their home. Rev. Hales, who is a native of England, landed in the United States, May 10, 1880, and this will be his first visit to his old home, and it is needless to add here that it will be a joyous occasion for the old mother awaiting the return of her son. He has many friends in Augusta who will wish him God-speed on his journey, and the best luck wherever he may choose to locate.

ELECTRIC SIGNS!

The distinguishing air of quality which a first-class Electric Sign gives to a store is the element which gives a sign its greatest value as an advertising medium and investment. The impression it makes is good. It blazes forth to the public that there is business enterprise, merchandise and methods up-to-date. It affects the entire atmosphere of the business district. The stranger says, "It is a live town," and publishes it abroad.
